by Viet Cong's Persistant Terror There are no magic numbers in Judy Elrick's book

She's a B.C. Telephone Company information operator, but witchcraft is not a tool of the trade. She has to look the numbers up.

"Information." Judy Elrick answered the inquiring call. She listened for a moment, then began searching the pages of her directory for the number requested. Before she found it, a conversation developed at the other end of the line, obviously an office somewhere. The words came through clearly on Judy's telephone headset.

Male voice: "Did you get that number?" Female voice: "In a moment, sir." Male voice, louder now: "You're not on to information again? Why don't you use the telephone directory?" Click. End of call.

Judy shrugged, then answered another call, then another and another. By the time she had completed that day's seven-hour shift as a B.C. Telephone Company information operator, she had handled more than 500 inquiries.

The survey report on her desk showed that more than 70 per cent of those calls were for telephone numbers listed in customer directories.

No Magic Formula "You see," Judy said later as she recalled the incident, which apparently involved a businessman and his secretary. "That girl is among the majority. Seven or eight of every ten calls to information service are made by people who could find the number in their directories, but they don't bother to look. "It's a shame, really, because, as that businessman seemed to recognize, they could save themselves at least the time it takes to call us if they'd use their directories.

"Information operators have no magic formula to produce a telephone number faster. We have to look through a directory each time."

Judy Elrick knows this from experience. At 20, this Winnipeg-born and Vancouverraised brunette has been a B.C. Telephone information operator for two years.

She guessed she has answered nearly 150,000 calls since taking up a switchboard position for the first time after completing a special training course. And the number goes up by about 500 every working day.

Who Sells Liver?

Most are routine requests for telephone numbers, which is appropriate since the purpose of the service is to provide telephone directory information only and the operators are instructed to restrict it to that.

"But I've had callers ask me how many miles it is to the moon, how to cook chicken and whether liver is sold at a certain department store," Judy said. "I just have to explain that we can't provide this kind of information."

Some callers become impatient and impolite. "I've had some threaten to look up the number themselves," Judy said. But most are reasonable and

The information operators must always be polite and, like Judy, all those in B.C. Telephone's information service are trained to control their emotions while on the job. They learn to accept even the abusive caller in stride.

"The only thing that really bothers us," Judy said, reflecting the feelings of her fellow operators, "is knowing that sometimes, all those calls for information which customers can find in their directories mean that people who really need directory assistance sometimes have to wait longer than they should to reach us."

The company is anxious to provide fast. efficient information service. But it must pay the costs, which now exceed $1.5 million a year, from revenues received from telephone customers and it can expand the service only within economic limits.

These limits are not strained in meeting efficiently the basic purpose of the service, which is to provide telephone numbers for listings not in directories distributed to each customer each year.

But they are strained by the total amount of information traffic today—the information service staff of more than 350 persons handles an average of 80,000 calls a day and the strain results from the fact that at least 70 per cent of these calls are for numbers customers can find in their telephone directories.

B.C. Telephone is observing the economic limits, even at the risk of a slightly slower speed of answer, because it must do so to protect the over-all interests of telephone

80,000 CALLS A DAY

The B.C. Telephone Company hesitates to say so, but it's begun to suspect that its information service has become too efficient.

Either that, or too many people just enjoy calling operators like Judy. Whatever the reason, the fact that so many are using information service rather than their telephone directories has created quite a problem.

Manning's Manifesto

THE THESIS OF THE federal political structure expounded by Premier Manning in his book on this subject has not been received with any marked enthusiasm in party circles—not surprisingly since if adopted it would disrupt their present makeup—but it is bound to be weighed by those in political author-

And possibly have some effect on the electorate at large, which none of the major parties can afford

The Alberta premier calls for a realignment of federal grouping into the two-party system of older times, although in the modern concept of what is loosely called of right and left vintage. It might be observed that his own pioneer Social Credit party, and also the emergence of the CCF grouping, vitiated the original two-party system. But one of the serious factors of today, that which induces the minority governments that handicap national governance, is the voting split that results from too many parties competing for public favor.

Mr. Manning's viewpoint is that on each of the henches which divide the Commons physically there are MPs of similar political bent, and it would be good for the country if these were polarized into two recognizable alternatives. He is certainly correct that Par-Hament does contain MPs on opposite sides of the Speaker who do not always subscribe to the policies of their parties even though they vote as the whips want them to do. Were more free votes allowed in the Commons, as well they might be on several measures that come up for discussion and passage, the real collective sentiment of the House would be more truly expressed. This would also take governments out of awkward situations that arise without fear of losing office, but none of them seems to recognize such an

The basis of the Manning credo is that ideology should be the principal element of administration, and in the abstract if this means a viable philosophy which should mark the behavior of governments then this submission has its merits. In the light of modern affairs for example every party should have a social conscience, and none of those who function at Ottawa would concede that they do not have one. Ideology carried to the extreme, however, can contradict the verity of human life and activity, as we have seen in some other countries during this century. There is the undeniable incidence that governnents in a democratic country must pay some attention to the pragmatic approach. Politics, and governance, has rightly been defined as the art of the e, which in another word means the practical. deology must bend on occasion to the mundane exercise of what can or can not be done; it might be cological for instance to desire a social context ein there was no poverty, no racial distinction, no disturbing nuclear menace, but the practical con-siderations of how to bring all this about are the cardinal features to which governments must of necessity give priority.

Even so, however, Mr. Manning's view that po-litical parties should have an ideal, an inherent philosophy that is the mainspring of their actions, is one that should underlie even the pragmatic approach to pressing problems. There is ample room in politics for idealism even in a program which of necessity must take into account the practical factors involved.

For the realignment Premier Manning advocates, has examined the various existing political groups the federal level and comes to the conclusion that the Progressive Conservative party offers the most promising field for the application of his thesis of two-party polarization, such a new grouping being of course to the political right. The presumption is that the alternative party grouping would be of a leftish

A notable aspect of his appraisal of the political scene, one which pays tribute to sincerity of his view point, is his admission that his own Social Credit Party is not a national political force and therefore unable to be the vehicle of the political transformation that he considers necessary in the best interests of the nation. It is because of this conclusion that he enjoins all Social Crediters to support the Progressive Conservative party.

Time will show whether the Alberta premier's ideas fall on stony ground, or the extent to which his treatise on federal politics permeates the national electorate when the next election is called.

Treasure in the Deep

THERE ARE FEW adventures with the romantic I appeal of a treasure hunt; and when the hidden riches lie fathoms deep on the sea bottom, the search takes on an additional excitement, spiced by danger.

An American team has advanced its plans for the examination of the wreck of the Lusitania to the point where salvage operations will shortly commence. The belief that the ship carried treasure when she was sunk by a U-boat off the coast of Ireland in 1915 may be without foundation. But it may be possible to recover part of her cargo which included a rich shipment of copper, as well as her giant screws, worth a small fortune for the metal they contain.

What will the divers find in the long-submerged hull of the huge Cunarder where more than 1,000 persons perished? It is a fascinating speculation.

Even more dramatic is the Royal Navy quest for a purported treasure of something like $2,800,000 believed to have sunk with the flagship of Admiral Sir Clowdisley Shovell, HMS Association, in 1707. She was one of four ships in a fleet of 22 which sank in a gale off the Scilly Islands, with a loss of life

The Association is believed to have taken on a store of "great riches of the grandees of Spain" when she called at Lisbon on her way home from a victorious campaign in the Mediterranean, as well as the admiral's personal fortune and wages for the fleet.

The hunt has been sourced by the finding of a gold coin in almost mint condition, dated 1704, on the Gilstone Reef, off the Scilly Islands, in exactly the locality where the Association was lost. It was a Portuguese piece, moreover.

Navy divers have already brought to the surface a number of cannon, some of them of bronze, which were not employed in the fleet after the 18th century, as well as other items consistent with salvage to be expected on the site of such a wreck as the Association's. Working 20 fathoms down, in thick seaweed, and hampered by swift tides, the men of the Royal Navy's diving crew may not be as thrilled by the prospect of breath-taking discovery as those who enjoy the exploit vicariously. But there is no denving the drama of their groping search which, at any moment. may disclose the bright bullion from the Association's

Vietnam War Bonanza For Japanese

By CHRISTOPHER LUCAS, from Tokye

Despite its insistently voiced political neutrality Japan is reaping prodigious financial profits from the war in Vietnam.

During fiscal 1967 Japan's total earnings related to the war may well bypass $1,500,000,000, according to responsible banking sources. Even the Japanese government, which maintains a delicate "hawk-dove" balance, admis that the onflict has had a healthy impact on the economy

The ministry of international trade and industry has in fact openly stated that the for Japan's stooning $532,-000,000 increase in exports

Similarly, trade ministry has disclosed that Japan careed a surface $430,000,000 in United States military procurement during the same period, the highest figure in 12

These statistics are impressive enough yet hardly comparable to Japan's exports to South Victorian itself, which last year increased an estantishing 187 per cent.

During this year's first five months, Japan enhorted a massive 150,000 tens of relied steel to South Korea, Thai-land, Malaysia and Singapore, a 60 per cent increase over the previous year.

tire, one of the safest tires ever made. Even the price will have a calming effect: you can buy a Goodyear polyester tire for about $30.

This is a new kind of tire. It's considered the most significant improvement in 20 years. The difference is in the cord, new polyester cord. This is an incredibly strong synthetic cord that has all the advantages of nylon and rayon combined. And with none of the disadvantages.

It's another first from Goodyear. The major car manufacturers have selected Goodyear polyesters as original equipment on their new cars. And safety isn't the only reason. These polyesters are also longer wearing. They've practically eliminated the problem of cuts and impact breaks.

They're smoother riding, and they're quieter running too.

They won't 'flat spot' overnight. So, no morning thump.

They'll even improve your gas mileage. Like all Goodyear tires, the new polyesters are fully covered by Goodyear's lifetime quality and road hazard guarantee. Talk to your Goodyear man soon about polyester tires by Goodyear. And because you feel so sure of them, they might even improve your disposition.

tobaccos for new Samson Dutch Cut.

They're here for you today in two fine blends: satisfying Samson Super Virginia and Samson Special Blend for more masculine tastes.

Because we cut our leaves in a special way to produce longer, finer strands of tobacco, you'll find Samson Dutch Cut smokes cooler, rolls neater, and burns more smoothly. Then we pack Samson Dutch Cut tobacco in a unique

Battle Columnst. Victorio B.C. Tuesday, August 8 19

Let's engage in the 57 Varieties game, better known as Catching Up on the news we somehow missed. Take for example, the CBC ending its ban on commercials for deodorants, girdles, brassieres, health clubs. hair removers and bathroom tissues. The CBC says subiects not considered polite in mixed company some years ago now are acceptable, but the real reason is its shortage of cash during centennial and Expo coverage. A ban remains on panties. NBC and big league baseball have signed a new three-year contract, for $50,000,000 compared NBC has chosen four added regulars for its expanded one-hour Hunt. ley - Brinkley newscast: Sander Vanocur in Wash-New York and Jack Perkins in Los Angeles. A Paris travel agency arranged for a CBS team of Canadian newsman Morley Safer and British cameraman John Peters to pose as tourists in Peking, Shanghal and three other Red Chinese cities. The result will be a one-hour documentary on CBS Aug. 15 . . . negotiations in the Seattle TV technicians' strike broke down at the weekend, and no new talks are in sight.

Fuller's Lake Again

Bylaw Set For Arena

By KLAUS MUENTER

NORTH COWICHAN-Fuller's Lake Arena needs et another bylaw before it can be built, and hopes that it would be ready for use this winter are melting in

"I only can repeat what I said earlier, the constant delay of this project is a cruel blow to the people in the north, who are willing to pay for their children's recreation.

When tenders for the arens were opened 10 days ago, another bylaw was suggested as one of the solutions to provide the extra money above the estimated arena construction cost of $330,000. The other solution then mentioned was the deletion of certain facilities.

The lowest bid for the arena was $370,786 and the highest Even if the lowest bid was accepted the bylaw would have to be considerably more than $40,000, which is the approxi-mate difference between the estimated cost and the lowest

Potato Tips

By M. V. CHESNUT

Garden Notes

Those of us who have picked up a bit of experience in gardening are inclined to take too much for granted when we fry to help our novice neighbours folks who are taking up this absorbing hobby for the first time. We have absorbed so much of the techniques through our pores, so to speak, that we unconsciously presume a basic knowledge on the part of the newcomer which he simply hasn't got, and we wind up by talking away over his head. This was brought home to me the other day when I found out that a neighbor of mine who had planted potatoes for the first time didn't have the fogglest idea of when and how to dig them up.

Actually, the potato is an accommodating fellow and he keeps on putting up signals all through the summer to let us know what is going on underground. If you watch your plants closely through the growing season, you will notice that the first top growth to appear grows straight upward, and the margins of the leaves will curve upward very slightly, making the leaf cupshaped. This is when the plant is living on the food reserves stored in that piece of potato you planted. A little later on, a slight change occurs in the growth habit of the plant. The haulm - this is the name we use for the topgrowth of potato plants starts to spread outward, and the leaves lose their cup-shaped appearance, with the edges turning slightly downward. Your plants now have roots of their own, and these roots are foreging for themselves. Tiny new potatoes are beginning to form.

The third stage is reached when the leaves lose some of their fresh green color. Some of the shine disappears, and they turn a darker shade of green. The energies of the plant are now being turned to plumping up the new potatoes underground, and it is at this stage you can tunnel down under the plant with a hand trowel and rob it of a few of its baby new potatoes for a delicious first feed of small new whole potatoes in

Finally, the haulm and the leaves start to turn yellow, and at that point you can lift your crop. The potatoes have attained their mature flavor and

If lifting is delayed much beyond this stage, there is some danger, given enough soil moisture, that the new crop will start into what we call secondary growth, putting out shoots of their own. If this should happen, your spuds will have to be eaten up at once, for once a potato starts to sprout and grow like this, it won't keep in good condition in winter storage.

When you lift your crop, you'll find it is a lot less messy if you cut away all the topgrowth first, leaving just a to mark the position of the plant. Cart all this haulm away to the compost heap and clean up the potato patch with a rake before you start forking up the tubers. In this way, you avoid infecting the tubers with any disease which may have been on the leaves. * * *

After digging, the crop is left out in the sun and air long enough to dry the skins thoroughly. Five or six hours should be enough - too much sun will turn the skins greens, and such green skins are mildly poisonous; greened potatoes may be eaten only if peeled deeply enough to remove all the green

ART BUCHWALD Nearly Dined with the Johnsons

Anyone for Hamburger?

PARIS - I almost had dinner with the Vice-president B. Johnson, and it was almost one of the greatest evenings I ever spent in Paris. This is what happened. The Vice-President and his wife had arrived to spend one day and night in Paris and had asked a very good friend of theirs, who also happens to be a very good friend of mine, if would select a restauran to give the dinner. My friend called me up and said, "How would you like to have dinner with the Vice-President of the United States and his wife?"

I said it would be nice. Well, I haven't cleared it will be all right. What restaurant should we dine at?" "Why don't you reserve at Novy's? It's got White Rusatmosphere." "Good idea," he said.

'Where shall we meet?" I asked excitedly.
"At the ambassador's." "What ambassador?" I

"No," I said.

"Well, I'll call the embassy and tell them you're going to have dinner with the Vice-President and I'm sure they'll invite you."

I couldn't wait to telephone my wife and tell her. But she wasn't home and I told our maid, Danielle, to tell my wife as soon as she came in that instead of eating hamburgers, we were having dinner with the Vice-President of the United States.

Then I went out to lunch and told everyone I met I couldn't have dinner with them that night because I was dining with the Lyndon John-

LONDON (NANA) - Natalie Wood has postponed her marriage to British 10 percenter, Richard Gregon. The event had been scheduled for July. Now the date is uncertain. The petite brunette star's past is littered with broken engagements. She reminds me of Kim Nevak, who would sprint to the brink, seemingly all set for the plunge, then hastily withdraw. With up to 40,000,000 gallons of water being used every day, the protracted dry spell is beginning to worry officials of the Greater Victoria Water District.

Commissioner Ronald Upward said Monday that he didn't at present envision restrictions on the use of water, but the continuing heavy demand was ausing him concern.

"The demand has never let up this year," Mr. Upward said. "Usually we have a peak consumption period and then the demand falls off, allowing us to catch our breath, but this summer the heavy demand for water goes on day after day. It's worrying."

He asked all Greater Victor ians to exercise a little restraint in their use of water. If they do may be needed.

Bylaw Set For Arena

By KLAUS MUENTER

NORTH COWICHAN-Fuller's Lake Arena needs yet another bylaw before it can be built, and hopes that it would be ready for use this winter are melting in the August heat.

North Cowichan Coun. Dennis Hogan, who is also the municipality's recreation commission chairman, said Monday "It is more than likely we shall need another bylaw for people in the northern part of North Cow-

"I only can repeat what I said earlier, the constant delay of this project is a cruel blow to willing to pay for their children's recreation."

When tenders for the arena were opened 10 days ago, another bylaw was suggested as one of the solutions to provide the extra money above the estimated arena construction cost of $330,000.

Class Total Drops Under 40

Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn said Saturday the district will have no classes with more than 39 pupils this September. His promise means there is little chance of a walkout by teachers who have announced they will refuse to teach classes of 40 or more this fall.

"It will be completely unnecessary to have any class of 40," said Mr. Bunn after consultation with district superintendent Joseph Chell. Last spring the B.C. Teachers' Federation decided no teacher should remain in an over-39 class. The BCTF voted to pay salaries of teachers who walked out

Last winter there were 411 classes with 40 or more pupils in B.C. schools, the BCTF reported. In 1965-66 there were 51 classes of 40 or more in the Greater Victoria school district, or 10.9 per cent of the total. Last winter there were "a few," said A. J. Isaacson, principal of Macaulay elementary school in Esquimalt and chairman of the BCTF's effective teaching and learning conditions committee. "The 40-and-more classes we did have here last year could have been avoided," said Mr. Isaacson. In B.C. I feel we will probably have about 30 oversize classes this fall."

Commissioner Ronald Upward said Monday that he didn't at present envision restrictions on the use of water, but the continuing heavy demand was causing him concern. "The demand has never let up this year," Mr. Upward said.

"Usually we have a peak consumption period and then the demand falls off, allowing us to catch our breath, but this summer the heavy demand for water goes on day after day. It's worrying."

* * * Normal summer consumption in the neighborhood of 32,000,000 gallons a day, but this year it has poured into Greater Victoria at a steady rate of etween 38,000,000 and 40,000,000 gallons. (See story on Page 15.) Mr. Upward said that he felt that in some cases water was being wasted. One reason this was so, he said, was because the cost of water to consumers was so low - lower than almos anywhere else in the province.

"I would sure love to see one good rain. Why, it's away back in May sometime since we had a good downpour. One good rain would bring the level of Sooke Lake up to where it should be and ease a lot of our minds,' the commissioner added.

* * * He asked all Greater Victor ians to exercise a little restraint in their use of water. If they do not, he said some sort of contro may be needed. Victoria oas never had water restrictions, Mr. Upward said, and he was not just sure how they could be imposed. They BONN-Huge surpluses of fruit and vegetables caused by the long hot summer are being burned, plowed into the ground, or just dumped in vast compost heaps in several European countries.

The destruction of the food glut, with Common Market approval, is being stepped up mainly in France and Belgium in an effort to stabilize prices rather than sell the food off cheaply. The news has led to massive protests by West German consumers' associations, taxpayers' leagues and political

They object to the operation being heavily financed by "destruction bonuses" paid from Common Market funds to which the West being paid $56,000 compensation.

The row which started over the tomatoes grew into a Common Market political "hot potato" last weekend when it was discovered that Belgian farmers had also tipped over half a million cauliflowers, onto gigantic compost heaps in return for a bonus of nine cents a cauliflower.

Party Politics Advocated at Municipal Level

QUEBEC (CP) - The Progressive Conservative party was urged Monday to introduce the party system at the municipal level of politics.

Prof. Eric Beecroft, political scientist at the University of Western Ontario, London, told the Conservatives' policy advisory conference this would help municipal decision-making. At a study group on urban affairs. Mr. Beecroft said: 'We should encourage parties at the federal and provincial level to organize at the local level. The problems are the same: housing, health, education, economic development.

"You are just leaving a great vacuum if you do not organize, It's a failure to be concerned, to come to grips with real problems."

Mr. Beecroft described municipalities as "the most obsolete part of our institutional structure." He called the present municipal system 'chaotic man-for-man political activity.'
